

TimeOut

10 NYC Artists 35 and Under You Should Know

Rose Marcus

By Howard Halle | June 24, 2016

This Atlanta native bases her mixed-media collages on incidental snapshots of New York that purposely look accidental—the kind of images that would ordinarily be deleted on your smartphone. Marcus blows them up into large-format prints augmented with pieces of fabric, paper and shaped incisions or cut-outs. Disjointed and opaque, they subversively comment on the culture of causally shared and disposal imagery in the age of social media—“pressing you” as Marcus puts it, “to look and then look again.”

Rose Marcus, photo: Melissa Sinclair